Title: Clinical Applications Specialist
Status: Full-time, Employee
Location: Sweden or Finland

Job Description:

Are you ready for a new challenge? Do you enjoy a stimulating and varied role that offers the opportunity to travel within Scandinavia and occasionally abroad. Maybe now is the time to join our friendly and dynamic team to work with clinical user’s everyday challenges from routine practice to research projects. Take the opportunity to work with our users and network in their progressive movement towards new diagnoses and treatments together with HERMES development and support team.

HERMES Medical Solutions is a global company with customers in more than 40 countries providing medical image analysis systems capable of communicating with any imaging modality, HIS/RIS or PACS system. HERMES specialises in nuclear medicine software, co-registration and fusion of studies from all modalities (e.g. CT, MRI, SPECT and PET), radiology reporting, and remote viewing.

The role involves a combination of providing training and support of clinical imaging staff in the use of HERMES clinical applications as well as technical support and trouble-shooting across the range of HERMES products. The support is undertaken either over web sharing the display or on-site.
Qualifications:

The candidate will have excellent problem-solving and communication skills, will be a flexible and self-motivated team player and will ideally have both clinical experience and technical expertise or interest along with the confidence required to work with medical imaging applications and systems at clinical centres across the Scandinavia and occasionally to other countries.

After a degree in Medical Physics the ideal candidate have obtained a couple of years of clinical experience from Nuclear Medicine and/or Radiology applications, HERMES usage would be advantageous. However HERMES provides on-the-job training for all staff.

Driver's license, fluent in speech, writing in English and Swedish or Finnish, other languages would be advantageous.

HERMES Medical Solutions offers a competitive salary and a rewarding, dynamic and stimulating environment working as a member of a friendly international team. Welcome to HERMES!
